

Andy Davies

I'm a designer with a focus on UX/UI design and brand identity systems, complemented by a background in illustration, animation, and fine arts.

I take pride in directing teams of other designers—it's a pleasure to teach and guide, helping them create even better work.

Mule Design Studio · Designer

January 2015–July 2016

Founded by Mike Monteiro and Erika Hall, Mule is an award-winning and world-renowned web design agency in San Francisco. With a central focus on research and strategy, Mule is run by a seasoned team of designers, researchers, strategists, and developers. They've been building delightful identities and web design solutions for clients for over fifteen years.

I both collaborated on and lead interface and identity design projects for a variety of clients, including Viz Media, the San Francisco Opera, and the Wikimedia Foundation.

GC · Art Manager/Designer

August 2013–May 2015

I oversaw and led art direction for team of nine student designers across a range of client projects, including print, exhibition, and signage projects. I led the redesign of the studio website, and directed an in-house redesign of the studio identity, developing an entirely new style guide and brand collateral. I taught and guided four junior designers and three interns.

Sweaty Robots

A collection of illustrations, self-deprecating stickers, and a talk revolving around the central theme of taking control of creative fear.

Illustration

I grew up with science fiction, Ellsworth Kelly, and heavy metal—so I draw a lot of damp, gnarly nightmares and cosmic geometry, among a million other things.
